This looks good. I think we need to explain that the price is the price once restored and it might depend a little upon just how high the level of restoration is.

I am Ok with your research as a) it means your copy is great and accurate, b) your copy is 'fresh' and you pick out the relevant interesting points that I will miss (because I know them already and so won't use them), and c) you can find things we don't know, such as finding the magazine article on the Celeste 330GT (which I now have and is in the cars file).

Keep up the great work.

Simon
